Week 3 Term 7

Principals Report

Pupil Free Day:

On Monday, we had our pupil free day. We had a number of staff doing different training for the day. IELC staff worked with Erika Von Aspern (Manager, Intensive English Language/New Arrivals Program) the teaching intensive English oral language. Mainstream teachers Year 1 to 7 went to the Partnership day at Westlakes shore and worked with Vei Li Soo on aspects of problem solving in maths. Our Special educators spent time with Sue Keily our Behaviour coach on aspects of Trauma and how it effects student learning. Debbie Johnson worked with a number of Performing Arts teachers within the state and overseas through Video Link to gather ideas about teaching Music and she shared her expertise with them about Drama. Liz Hillam went and worked with another Reception teacher at Lockleys North to look at "Book making" a process to engage receptions in writing. We shared this at our staff meeting on Tuesday and we all agreed that we got a lot of valuable learning experiences for the students at this school from the different training sessions.

Book Week :

It was great to see students dress up for our Parade on Friday of week 5. Lots of interesting costumes through the theme, 'Find your Treasure'. Staff looked pretty good also with a lot of them wearing quite elaborate costumes. There was also a Treasure Hunt for students with some prizes organised by the committee.

Science Week:

Martin Rieter - our Science teacher organised great resources for class teachers, culminating in a Science fair on the Friday. Y6/Y7 presented different experiments and worked with all classes in showing them their understanding of Science. Mitchell Park Kindy also came down to be involved and thoroughly enjoyed working with the older students.

Well done to all who participated in the painting and especially Deb Parsons for her organisation and getting a grant from the Marion Council.

Garden at Sainte-Adresse

G4 has been learning about the response genre and the class has been writing a response about Claude Monet's artwork.

"In 1867 Claude Monet painted a beautiful oil painting called Garden at Sainte-Adresse. Its dimensions are 98 cm by 1.3m. It is currently kept in the Metropolitan Museum, New York.

The painting suggests it's a windy day because the French flag and another unknown flag are blowing rapidly. Four people are on the deck and are enjoying the sea's company. The deck is decorated with a variety of flowers, making the deck look very prestigious and enlightening. The women are dressed in elegant white dresses and are holding parasols. The men are also dressed in elegant clothing such as dark grey blazers and cream coloured pants. The ocean is scattered with sailboats, but most are hidden in the distance while white, fluffy clouds hover above them. The sky is a beautiful blue colour suggests it is a sunny day.

Personally, what really catches my eye are the vibrant flowers scattered on the deck. What I really like is the fact that the painting is so realistic and Claude Monet must have worked hard to create this magnificent piece of art."

STEMSEL inventors' competition

"Two weeks ago Mr Harry, Josh, Dana, Mohammed and I went to a competition at East Marden Primary. We invented a bird scarer to help farmers. Farmers all around the world lose many crops every year because birds eat them. We had 3 lessons to make this, and program the chip. When we came back to school we added more to it to make it better. On the 6th of September we went to the Royal Adelaide show to show everyone our design. The judges assessed us and we got to look at other peoples design too. We found out that this competition is about helping people by making things to make it easier for them. We really enjoyed ourselves and I hope we will be able to do something like this again."

- Zoe (Y6)

"Today Zoe, Mohamed, Josh, Mr Harry and I went to the Royal Adelaide show for the STEMSEL competition we presented our project, pest and bird scarer. We designed this to scare away birds from farmers crops. The good it does for people is that farmers children don't have to stay home from school to help their parents which means they would lose education and also when the birds eat just a bit of the farmers crops they cant sell it and that's how they earn money for a living. Today was really good and I think we did well. There were lots of different inventions that were really cool and there were children from years 3-7."

- Dana (Y7)
